

Modern Slavery, Forced Labour and Human Trafficking Policy

Modern slavery, in all of its various forms, is a crime and a fundamental breach of human rights. ERA recognises that it has a responsibility to take a robust approach to slavery and is committed to maintaining procedures to ensure that the workforce that Era, and its suppliers, engage are not subjected to slavery, forced labour or human trafficking.

Era operates a comprehensive audit and inspection regime throughout its supply chain to assess risk and monitor compliance with the Modern Slavery Act 2015, and all employment legislation within the regions in which our supply chain operates.

Audited factors include, but are not limited to:

- The provision and implementation of policies for the prevention of slavery, forced labour, exploitation and trafficking
- Welfare and sanitary provision
- Provision of contracts of employment
- Provision of health surveillance
- Staff accommodation
- Staff consultation

Responsibility for reporting

All staff have a responsibility for the reporting of suspected incidences of slavery, forced labour and human trafficking and confidential reports can be made through the company whistleblowing helpline, or directly to senior management.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Ben Penson', with a long horizontal line extending to the right.

Ben Penson
Technical & Quality Director
July 2016

